	Policy:
	Reduced Teaching Assignments in Connections with Recruitment and Retention Offers
	Revision: 15 August 94	Effective: 15 August 94

Policy

Faculty at the University of Arizona are expected to contribute with distinction to our instructional programs, and our mission emphasizes the importance of these contributions as part of normal faculty life. Because reductions in teaching assignments make it more difficult for students to obtain the courses they need, and because such reductions shift the burden of excess students to other courses and other faculty members, as a general rule SBS does not permit reduced teaching assignments in connection with recruitment and retention offers. Exceptions may be granted in extraordinary cases, but such exceptions must be approved in by advance by the Dean.
